Lauren Scott, died today.

What can I say, I liked her, she was cute, and always enjoyable.

27 is too young to die, not that any age is the right age to die, currently I've got a friend well over 90 and all he things about is dying, he is tired, and would like to get off the world (Stop the World - I Want to Get Off); but this is another story).

Lauren was broken as so many of us are. She, like me, and many other battle our demons by some form of self medication. She was tormented by these demons, and it cost her her life. Passed out, in an homeless man's RV on skid row, she escaped one last time, went to an endless sleep.

Why? What was so bad. You are (were) the bravest person I knew. You did things, I only dream of doing. Why?

Thoughts...

It's a sad, sad story that such a beautiful, wonderful, awesome girl would die "homeless" and found dead in a broken down RV in Skid Row, LA.

What a body, and a cute little spinner at 63" (160mm) in height, and 105 pounds (48 kg).

You will always have a home, with me.
